DETAILED ACTION

This Office Action is in response to the election filed 7 November 2003.

Election/Restrictions

Claims 14-25 are withdrawn from further consideration pursuant to 37 CFR 1.142(b) as being drawn to a nonelected method of making a semiconductor device, there being no allowable generic or linking claim. Election was made without traverse in Paper No. 11/7/03.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-8 and 11-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Shi et al. (U.S. Patent 5,817,431).

Shi discloses an organic electroluminescent device for an electronic device (Fig. 1) that contains an anode (14), a cathode (26), an organic compound film containing a hole transporting material (18) and an electron transporting material (22), wherein the organic compound has a structure comprising in a direction from the anode to the cathode, a hole injecting region (16) contacting the anode, hole transporting region (18) comprising the hole transporting material, a first concentration change region, a mixture region (20) containing the hole transporting material and the electron transporting material and a light emitting region for light emission from a triplet excitation state is formed in the mixture region and a blocking material (Alq3) added in the mixture region (Column 4, lines 24-26), a second concentration change region, an electron transporting region (22) containing the electron transporting material and an electron injecting region (24) contacting the cathode, where the light emitting device can be an active matrix liquid crystal device or a passive matrix device. (Column 1, lines 41-45) In regards to the to the x/y ratio of the hole transporting material and the electron transporting material, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have a certain x/y ration for the hole transporting and electron transporting materials, since it has been held that discovering an optimum value of a result effective variable involves only routine skill in the art. In re Boesch, 617 F. 2d 272, 205 USPQ 215 (1980).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 9 and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Shi et al.

Shi et al. discloses all the limitations except for the mass percentage of the hole transporting material and the mixture region having a certain thickness. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have a certain mass percentage of the hole transporting material and the mixture region having a certain thickness, since it has been held that where the general conditions of a claim are disclosed in the prior art, discovering the optimum or workable ranges involves only routine skill in the art. In re Aller, 105 USPQ 233 (1955).

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

European Patent Application 1 065 737 a2 (Choong et al.) refers to an organic electroluminescent device that contains a hole transporting, hole injecting region, an electron transporting region, electron injecting region, first and second concentration change regions, anode and cathode and a mixture region with a light emitting material therein.
